Pioneering Management Education for Global Corporate Citizenship and Peace

Management is a dynamic function. Management education, therefore, demands continuous innovation. All great centres of higher learning in management education have shown exemplary resilience in the face of VUCA times. MIT-WPU carries forward that spirit and brings new and emerging dimensions to teaching, learning, and research in business education while embedding industry insights and experiential learning into each curriculum.

In a way, we follow the 'great traditions' in management education by integrating case studies, simulations, skills development, and rural and international immersions, at the same time we develop our own 'little traditions' in infusing the Indian ethos and spirit into management education and localising our content and cases. Management for Global Peace is our mantra. No other university other than ours in the world has a demonstrated commitment to work to create business leaders for building peace.

With world-class teaching, research, on-campus facilities, and highly competent and industry-oriented faculty, all our specialised courses have been unique programmes attracting global attention. Our MBAs develop holistic leaders as our course content has been multidisciplinary, technology-driven, case-based, solution-oriented, forward-thinking, and entrepreneurial.

We have a global presence of our alumni who bring their unique academic and industry networks to us for higher research, training, internships, and placements. Our pool of international faculty members adds immense value to keep us engaged in global discussions and innovations in the industry, job market, and patents.

Here, our students are not just interested in receiving knowledge, getting good grades, and graduating, but they emerge as collaborators and co-creators of knowledge. This makes us different from other institutes and they represent us as our brand ambassadors of knowledge and problem-solving.

MIT-WPU is a firm believer in the combined power of science and spirituality. Building inner strength, and focusing on self-development, our School of Management is a leader in India to incorporate ancient Indian values with modern business education.

May I invite all of our students, parents, professionals from industry, academics, policymakers, and staff members to join us in our endeavour to create a world-class business education centre at MIT-WPU and add value to India's rise as a global power?

Wishing you great luck!

RSOL Students visit INSEAD, Singapore

First-year MBA students from Ramcharan School of Leadership participated in an international immersion programme at INSEAD, Singapore, focusing on leadership and strategy. Held from April 30 to May 1, 2024, the programme provided invaluable exposure to global business and management perspectives.

Divided into four intensive sessions, the programme allowed deep engagement and immediate application of learning. Amitava Chattopadhyay, the esteemed programme director at INSEAD, led three sessions on strategic decision-making and leadership. Students participated in case study discussions and breakout room activities, crafting presentations on product segmentation, names, slogans, packaging, and advertisements tailored to specific markets. They also learned about the Decision-Making Unit (DMU) and applied this knowledge to a Sk-II case study, constructing a triangle framework encompassing the company, customer, and competition.

The final session, led by Professor Guoli Chen, focused on the Blue Ocean Strategy. Through case studies, students gained deep insights and used the ERRC Framework to create presentations explaining their understanding, which they shared with peers.

The Leadership and Strategy Programme at INSEAD was transformative for the MIT-WPU MBA students, offering a unique opportunity to explore international business practices and strategic thinking. This experience broadened their perspectives, enriched their academic development, and equipped them for future professional success.
